The Wave Power Pier

The Asbury Park, New Jersey, Shore

Press says: "Mr. N. O. Bond, the inventor and constructor of the wave power pier at the foot of Wesley Lake, took up his headquarters at the Grand Avenue Hotel last week, and without loss of time put a force of men at work on his great ocean pump. A thorough inspection of the pier, pump, and water-tank showed that no damage had been sus-tained by any part of the works during the To Norfolk and Fortress Monroe, winter. A thorough overhauling of the pier is now in progress, in preparation for the summer's work. Mr. Bond says that he will put into immediate execution his origi-nal design, which was the piecing of a large iron float to be operated by the wave swells. This float was procured last season, and lay This float was produced last season, and lay on the pier all summer but was not put in place. This, it is estimated, will raise 500 gallons of water at every swell of the waves, which would be on an average 500 gallons every eight seconds. The lauge swinging gates, which were objects of so great curiosity last season, were an after-thought on the part of the inventor, allowed the first placed in position. hough they were the first placed in position. The entire force of the wave-pumps will be made available as soon as possible, the water pumped being turned back into the ocean, the intention being to demonstrate the power the intention being to demonstrate the power that can be obtained. If the supply of water proves ample and satisfactory, Mr. Bond hopes to make arrangements with Asbury Parit and Ocean Grove to convert Wesley Lake into a salt-water lake. Water for sprinkling purposes will also be furnished to Ocean Grove. The pumps and iron float, with their intermittent flow of sea-water, will undoubted by he one of the great curios will undoubtedly be one of the great curies titles of the season. Next come a victoria, beautifully decorated with flowers in the form of a nest. This was occupied by the Misses Santa Cecilla. Following were the carriage of Ramon Prida Gardenia and a pany phaeton and carriage representing large bouncies, the latter the property of large bouquets, the latter the property of Reardo Biacquez. Then came a four-in-hand decorated with flowers in the Spanish colors and attended by forty cavaliers on horseback, the carriage being filled with ladies. This feature of the festival cost $1,500.
Then followed the victoria of Guillermo Achia, decorated with flowers. Sabastian Camacho's landau came next. It had been covered with flowers to represent a bouquet, and the hoofs of the horses drawing it were gilded. The carriage of Thomas Moran, which followed, was one of the most artistic features of the procession. Next came the victoria of the German Charge d'Affsirs, and of Senor Saldana, the dog cart, driven tan-

BRISTOL, TENN .- To-day probably no part of the new world offers as many tempting inducements for the investment of Northern capital as the Southern States, most particularly Tennessee and Southwest Virginia, the richest section in the South, in mineral and timber advantages.
